City dump has the cleanest kitchens?

► Department of Health celebrates one-year anniversary of letter grades
► Staten Island ranks top in tidiness ► But some don't trust the system

One year ago today, the city Department of Health started grading restaurants "A," "B" and "C." Now the results are in: You'll have to hop on the Staten Island ferry to get to the cleanest eateries in New York.

According to Metro's analysis of the Department of Health's data, 73 percent of Staten Island's graded restaurants earned an "A" — higher than the citywide average of 69 percent.

Still, some New Yorkers doubt the integrity of the city's much-touted program. "I could care less about Staten Island," said private concierge Zayna Abdul, 32, of Brooklyn.

Abdul says she pays attention to grades, but she also thinks there might be holes in the system.

Restaurant owners and industry experts say the methodology is unfair.

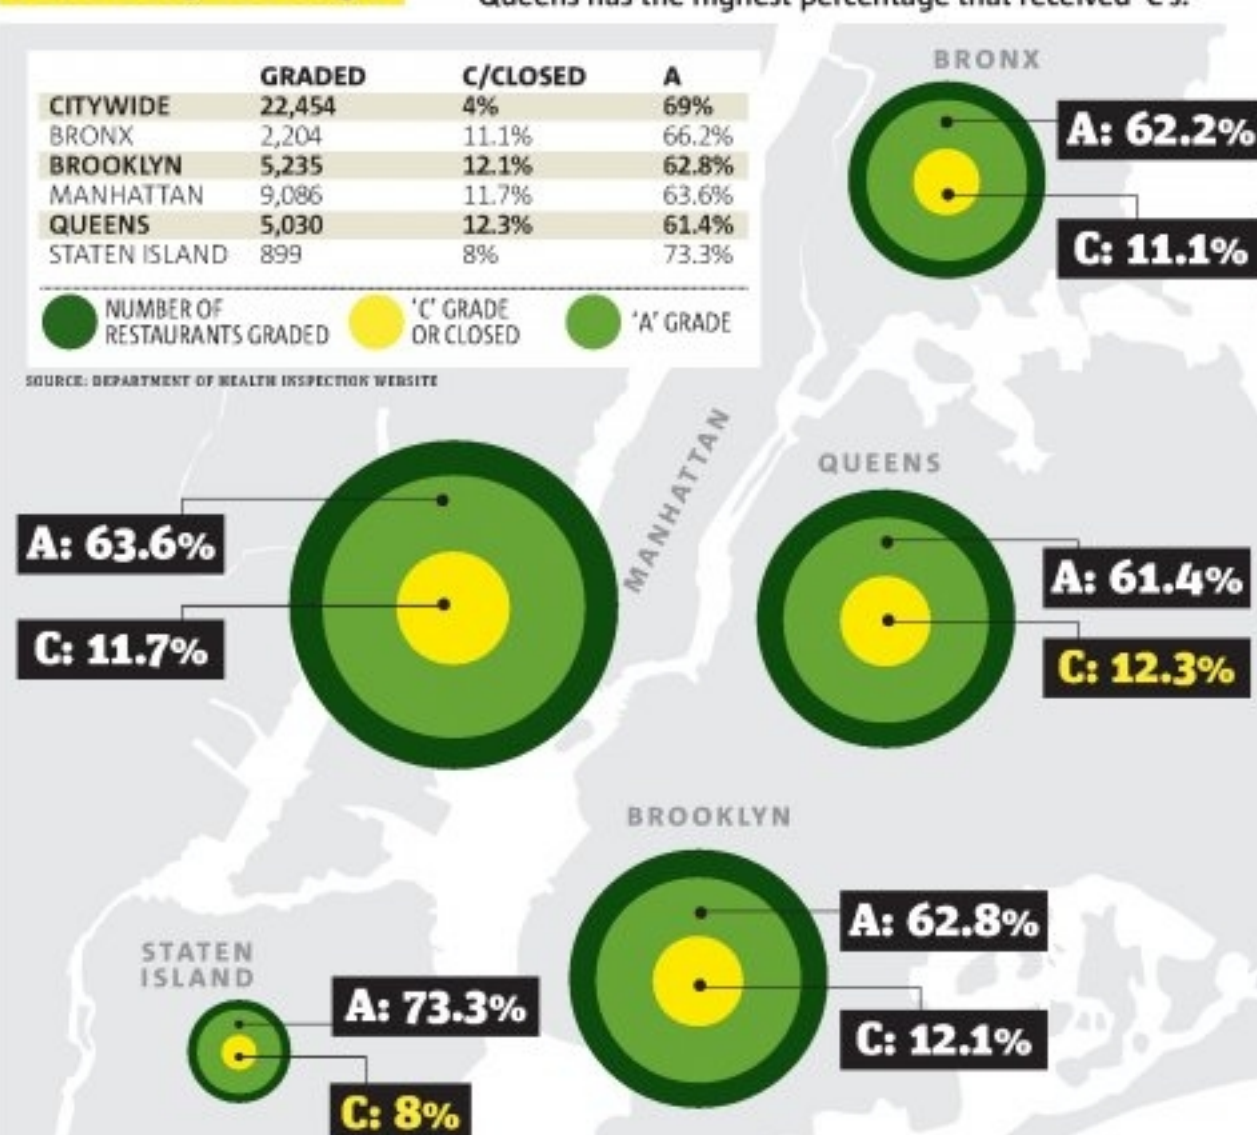

"This system causes small-business owners anxiety, fear and sleepless nights," said Andrew Rigie, of the New York Restaurant Association. "A 'B' or a 'C' can mislead the public. If a restaurant is safe enough to serve the public, it should not be punished."

The health department's one-year program has also been marred by news of bribery allegations. In February, Jacob Isakov, the 26-year-old owner of Gan Eden restaurant on West 47th Street, was arrested when he attempted to bribe a DOH inspector with $100 for a favorable grade.

Staten Island has the highest ratio of 'A'-grade restaurants. Queens has the highest percentage that received 'C's.

Food carts next up?

NEW YORK. What's the next thing in New York that may get slapped with letter grades?

One city councilman wants food carts to start brandishing the conspicuous "A," "B" and "C" grades. City Councilman Daniel Garodnick has introduced legislation mandating food carts be subject to letter grading. The Department of Health found 2,517 violations so far this year on food carts, ranging from food being kept at the wrong temperature, a lack of hand washing by vendors to even live vermin.

"There should be no ambiguity as to whether the food you're eating is safe and clean and free of vermin and other problems," said Garodnick.

Kelly tops a list of mayoral candidates

Who trails Kelly?

Former Rep. Anthony Weiner had been a top contender before resigning last month over explicit photos. Here's who's left:

- 1 City Council Speaker Christine Quinn, who is publicly gunning for the gig, garnered 18 percent.
- 2 Brooklyn Borough President Marty Markowitz had 12 percent of voters' support.
- 3 City Comptroller John Liu received 10 percent.
- 4 Former comptroller and mayoral candidate Bill Thompson got 8 percent.

He could rule New York City — if only he wanted to.

Police Commissioner Ray Kelly leads the pack of 2013 mayoral candidates, according to a Quinnipiac poll released yesterday.

Kelly, who became commissioner in 1992, garnered 23 percent of New Yorkers' support.

"Everybody talks about Ray Kelly," Mickey Carroll, director of the Quinnipiac University Polling Institute, told Metro. "I don't think he's going to run, and I think if you ask him, he'll say he's not going to run. But there it is, people Kelly impressed New Yorkers, Carroll said, by keeping crime levels low and seeming approachable. For example, his sadness was palpable when he announced the death of 9-year-old Leiby Kletzky earlier this month.

But Fordham political science professor Christina Greer said 2013 is a long way off. "That could just be the shock bump, where it's the first time they've seen a new name," she said. "It's so early."

Increased security for Ramadan

The Muslim holiday of Ramadan begins on Aug. 1, and the NYPD is increasing patrols around mosques, Police Commissioner Ray Kelly announced yesterday.

The NYPD always steps up patrols at the city's Islamic centers during Ramadan, but they are especially concerned this year after last week's attack in Norway, where the shooter said he was fighting the rising threat of Islam.

Kelly said police have not heard of any specific threats, but the NYPD also added patrols around Scandinavian consulates and government buildings.

Transit time bomb: Fare hikes coming

► Fare hike looming in 2013 and again in 2015 ► MTA also wants a freeze on wage raises, and city to chip in

The MTA is taking New Yorkers for a ride — again.

The transit authority released its preliminary budget for the next four years on Tuesday, and in it the MTA is mulling two fare hikes.

As previously announced, the authority wants to increase fares by 7.5 percent in 2013 and plans to do so again in 2015. At the same time, the authority wants to borrow $7 billion from the state and federal government.

Fleeing MTA chair Jay Walder, who is leaving in October for a high-paid job running a transit system in Hong Kong, said the budget has a "fragile stability." But board member Andrew Saul called the MTA's debt "a ticking time bomb."

"We need to watch this debt time bomb because it's going to become a major problem in the future," warned Saul. "The job's not finished."

Saul pointed out that the projected preliminary plans would raise the MTA's debt to $31 billion.

On top of loans and fare hikes, the MTA also wants to deny its unionized workers raises for three years in a row.

To save the ailing system, Chief Financial Officer Robert Foran suggested that the city chip in more for some capital projects, such as the Second Avenue subway line.

Two sides, game of chicken

WASHINGTON. Republicans and Democrats rushed to rework rival deficit reduction plans yesterday, but with the fate of both proposals heavily in doubt top lawmakers pursued a behind-the-scenes compromise to avert a crippling U.S. debt default.

Signaling a potential for compromise, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, a Democrat, said current plans can "easily" change. Senate Democratic aides said they hoped that once Boehner's plan is killed — either by the House or Senate — then support will grow for Reid's one-step remedy, which Obama backs. REUTERS

Americans already concerned about their jobs begged Washington politicians yesterday to stop dithering, cut the budget and resolve a debt crisis they fear could lead to higher interest rates or worse.

Americans struggling to right themselves after the collapse in real estate values were concerned that a threatened downgrade of top-rated U.S. debt would raise interest rates.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

The feed ...

► Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Aimee Mann is a Timberlake fan, Joel McHale is unnerved by slang, Pee-wee Herman is celebrating and Lindsay Lohan doesn't like what's being reported about her.

► @aimeemann
Watching SNL rerun...honestly, if there's a bigger quintuple threat out there than Justin Timberlake, I've yet to see it.

► @joelmchale
An older gentleman (mid 60's) ended the conversation we were having with the phrase, "Lates". Made me feel insane.

► @peeweherman
Happy National Tequila Day!

Love how going to a friends birthday turns into a slew of lies! grrr - oh well... happy sunday all

Skarsgard split

After two years together, "True Blood" star Alexander Skarsgard has reportedly split from girlfriend Kate Bosworth, according to Us Weekly. "It was very mutual," a source says. "And it happened awhile ago." Skarsgard definitely seemed single while hitting the party circuit at San Diego Comic-Con last weekend, where sources say he got flirty with a brunette before leaving with her. "He's single, and he is loving the attention," the source says. My theory? Bosworth's neck just couldn't handle the strain.

The ex-bride wore white — a bit too soon

Poor Kristin Cavallari — not only is her engagement to Jay Cutler over, but photos surfaced online yesterday of her modeling wedding dresses, taken two days before Cutler reportedly called it off. If it's true that the Bears quarterback did stop the wedding, it's rather cruel he did so soon after she was snapped wearing white. Also sad? This headline from TMZ: "Kristin Cavallari — The TRAGIC Wedding Dress Photos." Whoa. Calm down there, TMZ. Isn't "tragic" a bit over the top? Maybe "embarrassing" would be more accurate. Tragic would be if she severed her femoral artery on a runaway sequin, not just having a picture taken of herself (which, from what I can tell, is pretty much her career). Girlfriend is 24. In Hollywood math, that means at least seven more chances for her to wear white.

Talking points

Mumford and wives?

Carey Mulligan and her Mumford and Sons boyfriend, Marcus Mumford, are reportedly engaged, according to the Sun. "Carey looked like the cat who had got the cream. She was wearing a beautiful ring and didn't seem to mind who saw it," says a source who spotted the two at a party at a country estate in southwest England. "They were stuck to each other like glue. She was doing most of the talking and he was hanging on her every word."

Demi Lovato: An inspiration

Despite the rough two years Demi Lovato has had — including a stint in rehab and announcing she'd suffered from addiction and eating disorders — the Disney star says she's much more comfortable with fans looking up to her now.

"Kids used to tell me, 'You're my role model.' And I'd want to shake them and be like, 'Why?'" Lovato says, according to Hollyscoop. "I finally feel like I can inspire people. I can be proud of it."

McQueen cash: For the dogs

Alexander McQueen certainly wanted to make sure his canine companions were looked after. The late British designer reportedly left a decent chunk of his $26 million estate to his three dogs and two animal charities, according to The Associated Press. McQueen's will included $82,000 for the care of his three dogs and $164,000 for the Battersea Dogs and Cats Home and the Blue Cross, a charity for abandoned animals.

'The Simpsons' hits 500 episodes

- Executive Producer Al Jean on the series' milestone
- Other highlights to look forward to in Season 23

Sick of "The Simpsons"? Impossible, we say! The series is set to hit 500 episodes on Feb. 19, 2012, after all. But according to series executive producer Al Jean, not everyone is feeling the love. "There's a big town meeting that the Simpsons don't know about, and when they go in, the town is saying, 'We're going to get rid of the Simpsons,'" Jean said Tuesday, explaining the milestone episode's plot to TV critics touring the show's animation studio, Film Roman, in Burbank, Calif. "They're sick of them."

AMBER RAY
amber.ray@metro.us

Highlights

For fans still on Team Simpson, Jean spilled other highlights of Season 23, premiering Sept. 25:

- The "Treehouse of Horrors" episode will actually air around Halloween this year: Oct. 30.
- Another holiday-themed half-hour — a Christmas episode — takes place 30 years in the future. "Bart is this lousy, deadbeat dad who actually lives in the school, which is now condos, and Skinner is his landlord," Jean says.
- In another episode, Homer becomes a Glenn Beck-like pundit. He leads the "Gravy Boat" movement and selects Ted Nugent as his ideal presidential candidate. The Nuge guest stars — and sings!

- Pop-culture spoofs and homages abound. In a parody of "Inception," Jean says: "One dream level was [drawn in] the 'Tracey Ullman Show' style" — like the animated series' early days.
- Another reference of note: "Lost." "We have a show coming up where Homer gets addicted to a show that's basically 'Lost,'" Jean says. "It ended five years ago, but he's like, 'Don't tell me how it ends!' We're doing it post-'Lost,' and five years from now it will still be post-'Lost,' so it should hold up."

► "The Simpsons" returns for Season 23 on Sept. 25.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE ...

► Actor Dominic Cooper, the cute kid from 'Mamma Mia,' goes bad as Saddam's kid in 'The Devil's Double' ► The tricky aspect of playing two characters — at the same time

While Dominic Cooper has received rave reviews for much of his previous work in films like "The History Boys" and "An Education," none of them have necessarily been from the actor himself — until now. "I am for the first time ever very proud of it. You so rarely are," the 33-year-old British actor says of "The Devil's Double," his new film. "You look at stuff that you do and you just pick holes in it. You go, 'It's all right. It's just me, being an idiot on the screen, farting around. I can't believe I got paid for that. Ridiculous.'"

In "The Devil's Double," Cooper takes on the real-life roles of Uday Hussein — son of Saddam — and Latif, an Iraqi soldier pressed into service as Uday's body double. "It was difficult doing the third character, which was him impersonating Uday," he says. "Getting the balance there and not immediately assuming he was any good at it — why would he be any good at it, pretending to be somebody else? What we do in our ridiculous profession, why would a guy who was a soldier and a good man be able to throw himself into impersonating this horrific monster?"

A bigger challenge for Cooper was playing opposite himself, a feat accomplished by filming him as Uday first for the most part, then filming the scene again as Latif, acting around what he'd just done. "I'd rush off and get changed and then be looking at these random spots and trying to remember the performance where it was," he says. "I had the sound of me in my ear doing that performance — awfully off-putting, as well, hearing yourself do a performance, going, 'Oh God, that was wrong! That was horrible,' and then trying to do a performance opposite it."

Playing the part

"I look forward to hearing people's reactions from that part of the world, that region," he says, about the tricky job of taking on a different race. "I got a compliment the other day from a guy who'd only seen the trailer. He was an Arabic guy, and he was like, 'You play a really good Arab,'" Cooper remembers. "That means a lot to me. Why I was thinking I possibly could play an Arab is completely ridiculous, really."

In concert

Flaming Lips and Weezer head-to-head headlining

They may have reached their pop chart peaks in the 1990s, but over the past few years the Flaming Lips and Weezer have reached new heights of live performance, inventing ridiculous new tricks to enhance their shows and engage their audiences. So if they ever played together, who would headline? That, says Lips frontman Wayne Coyne, was exactly the dilemma that led to the two bands' unique show at Jones Beach tomorrow night.

"We've kind of agreed that we're going to do this thing, and it would be utterly absurd, like we'll do a big intro where all the groups are there, we play some intro together, I go out in my space bubble, and I'm proposing that Rivers [Cuomo Weezer singer] goes out in his Weezer canoe, and the crowd sort of lets us jostle each other," says Coyne. "I think we're going to play this intro together and then we'd close the show with us and Weezer playing 'She Don't Use Jelly,' and us and Weezer both playing 'The Sweater Song.'"

You may have heard about this little sleeper hit. The final installment of the franchise pits Potter against his lifelong nemesis, the creepily noseless Lord Voldemort.

8 'Horrible Bosses' No one likes working for a man-eater, a psychopath or a total jerk, but only a few of us would actually embark on eliminating said boss. Jason Sudeikis, Charlie Day and Jason Bateman star as three hard-working men who attempt to do just that.

9 'Zookeeper' Fans of Kevin James will likely enjoy his romp around a Boston zoo where talking animals give him dating advice in order to help him win back his materialistic ex-girlfriend.

10 'Transformers: Dark of the Moon' Michael Bay has paid for the sins of the last "Transformers" film with this straightened-out sequel, which features fight scenes where you can actually see what's going on.

Trading sunscreen for movie screens

► Organizers for Flicks on the Beach hopes this new event brings new revenue ► Indie filmmakers reach new audiences ► Bring a beach blanket!

► Flicks on the Beach will be held every Monday at Boardwalk West and West 10th St. throughout the summer.

LORENZO TIJERINA

Much like disco, nothing lasts forever. As developers give Coney Island a makeover, vendors, residents and visitors watch with emotions ranging from nervous trepidation to cautious anticipation.

Everyone, however, seems to agree that the new film series, Flicks on the Beach, which kicked off July 11 with "Saturday Night Fever," is good for everybody.

"I think it's great," says

Catalina Rodriguez, a 21-year-old Williamsburg resident who braved the trek for the 1977 coming-of-age story starring John Travolta as Tony Manero, a Bay Ridge club rat who longs for something more.

Like Manero, Coney Island has visions of grandeur, which include new hotels and condos. And as construction continues, Coney Island community leaders are hoping Flicks on the Beach — which will be showing blockbusters like "Iron Man 2" (Monday) and classic films like "Annie Hall" (Aug. 8) — will bring in new visitors and new revenue. Councilman Domenic Recchia was on hand at the screening to encourage visitors to have a good time and "spend some money."

For the kick-off, more than 300 people gathered with beach blankets and coolers to enjoy the picturesque shots of the Verazano-Narrows Bridge and a dancing Travolta.

They also got a look at independent director Charlie Ahearn's latest short film "All City," which he describes as an anthem for New York. "It's even more than democratic," says Ahearn of the screenings, which will feature independent shorts before each main attraction. "This is a New York experience."

'120 Minutes' away from reality

► MTV2 is bringing back a classic music series and the host who made it famous ► Matt Pinfield on throwing a big alternative rock party

When Matt Pinfield first hosted the weekly alternative music roundup "120 Minutes" on MTV, the videos he played actually were an alternative to the mainstream music that dominated the network. That late-night dose of independent music on Sundays was, for many, the only chance to absorb such glorious weirdness.

That was more than 15 years ago, and now indie rock is everywhere. But when a revamped "120 Minutes" hits MTV2 this Saturday, it will be an alternative of another sort: Music videos on an MTV network again, as opposed to their usual reality programming.

Pinfield, who has always been known as much for his wealth of information as he was for being, as he says, "a short, bald guy who doesn't look like a model," is quick to point out that the network has been running hip-hop vids on "Sucker Free Sundays."

"I don't think anybody over there ever didn't want to keep playing music," he says. "It was just the success of all those reality shows ended up taking over. But it is exciting to be in on the re-birth of music here."

When discussing music, Pinfield speaks like he's rushing to put his thoughts

► You can just see it in his face: Matt Pinfield, left, loves music, and the sounds of Sleigh Bells, right. "120 Minutes" airs at midnight on Saturday on MTV2.

"I've always had ADD, that's why music was the focus that reeled me in. I think the rest of the world has caught up."

into words before a new thought occurs.

"I've always had ADD, that's why music was the focus that reeled me in," he says. "I think the rest of the world has caught up, because the way people digest music and information has changed quite a bit."

The new show certainly is faster paced. Where the original program had a guest or two, "120" 2.0 is packed with artists big and small, from Kings of Leon and Foo Fighters to smaller acts that Pinfield hopes to introduce to wider audiences. "It's a party philosophy," says Pinfield of his programming. "If you go to somebody's house for a party and you know one or two people, you're going to hang out and they might introduce you to one or two others."

What had Pinfield been up to in the 12 years since "120 Minutes" shut down shop?

► He worked for Columbia Records in development for five years and hosted a radio show on WRXP, which was sold last month and changed formats. "I'm disappointed too, believe me," he says of losing his show. But in terms of when it all went down, he says he "got very, very lucky in time to work on this."

Tips for taking photos of your kids

► Don't forget these priceless moments

► Professional children's photographer, Carly Abbott, shares her advice on getting great snapshots of your little ones

METRO

1. Natural lighting

Turn off your flash. No matter how well you know your flash, it is an enemy. It flattens everything and makes your images boring. Go outside, or in a room with great window light. And more is not always better. If the noonday sun is bright, head into the shade where there is no glare — and no squinting.

2. Forget posing, just play

It's a general rule that kids hate a photo shoot. You do get the rare ham who loves to pose, but it almost always gets goofy. I prefer to let kids play in a familiar environment and catch them in moments of fun. If a kid is having fun and you get their attention, they will most likely grace you with a pause and a smile.

3. Don't forget the background

Your child may look like the Gerber baby, but the eye will immediately be drawn to the chainlink fence and trash can behind her. Funky colored walls, pretty blankets and nature can all be wonderful accents.

4. Get an SLR

There are wonderful point-and-shoot cameras out there, but to get truly great results, nothing beats a digital SLR. And the market these days is full of affordable consumer cameras. Throw it on the portrait automatic setting to start, or get brave and play with it in manual. You will truly see a difference.

5. Call in a pro

Obviously, only Brangelina have paparazzi covering every family outing. Using these tips, you can capture your kids' childhoods for them to treasure, and to share with friends and family. But nothing beats the images you will get with a professional child photographer. So, every once and a while, for new births, birthdays, etc., give one a call. The shoot will be quick, fun, and you'll be glad you did it.

It's Our Mission.

Dinner's ready!

- ▶ Times are tough and children cost money to feed
- ▶ A new website tells you where the meal bargains are Having kids might provide a nice little tax deduction, but they also cost a lot to raise. Even if you're not going to bother saving for their college education, you'll at least have to keep them well-fed, and that costs money.

Fortunately, plenty of restaurants offer special deals on kids' meals. Chili's, for instance, offered a coupon last month for free kids' meals with the purchase of an adult entree. Yesterday, we came across a site that helps thrifty parents find all the best kids' meal deals at their local restaurants.

KidsMealDeals.com has a simple premise: Type in your ZIP code, and the site tells you if any restaurants in your area are offering special deals on kids' meals. Using the site, we found out that Brother Jimmy's BBQ here in New York has a deal every day where you get a free kid's meal for every $10 you spend on the regular menu.

The site offers free mobile applications for when you don't have time to go home and look up a deal before taking the kids to basketball, football and soccer practices. And, the site also has a Twitter feed with updates on national and local deals, so be sure and check that out if you're sick of paying so much to keep your children fed. MAINSTREET

It's up to you, Washington

In your hands, my dissatisfied Tea Party officials, is the momentous issue of raising the debt ceiling. By not raising the debt ceiling, you will be responsible for bringing about a catastrophic disaster on the republic. We are not enemies, but you have chosen to be America's enemy. There is still time for you to correct this, although the time is quickly evaporating for you to embrace the better angels of your conscience.

ANTHONY P. JOHNSON, VIA E-MAIL

Bad enough that no one will heed what the president is asking for — compromise — due to their dislike of him. Bad enough that no senator or representative will heed nor vote for anything the opposite party is proposing simply because it is being proposed by the opposite party. This war between Democrats and Republicans is about to destroy our entire country and possibly the world. Are we powerless to stop it? GAIL MCSORLEY, VIA E-MAIL

Small views, small wonder

RE: "WHY ARE MY VIEWS SO

SMALL?": If "pieces" fitting together defines marriage, then same-sex marriage shouldn't be a problem — same-sex couples have "pieces" that fit together just fine. Also, homosexuality occurs naturally in the wild. Typically, in the wild, an animal's instinct is to procreate. So how do you explain that? COURTNEY CASWELL, VIA E-MAIL

Why should the rich suffer?

Many letters in Metro have reflected an attitude that we must "tax the rich" and make them "pay their fair share." The top 5 percent of income earners in this country account for 59 percent of the tax burden. How much is enough? What percent should the wealthy pay in taxes before you stop whining about "evil millionaires" hoarding their hard-earned money? KELLY DONNOE, LYNBROOK

Media lets us down again

I cannot believe that the return of football is on all news channels and the fools in the government trying to settle the budget problems is hardly seen. Why do people on social security have to worry about getting their money, why have they not agreed to something?? No, they want to keep bickering. SANDRA J. ROTONDI, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Praise, politeness and tact are tools that always work very well for everybody. However, you will need one more element — sincerity.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Your word must always be your bond, especially when making a commitment to a special someone. A broken promise could leave a wound that would be extremely difficult to heal.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. You're good at flowery speech, but you might be tempted to lay it on rather thick, leaving a lot of doubt in another's mind. Better use a thinner brush.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Although you're basically an intense person, you could be more bold than smart — and get yourself in a lot of trouble. As the saying goes, "Don't rush in where angels fear to tread."

Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. The last thing you need to tell someone who comes to you for help is what you believe she or he wants to hear. It'll hurt your pal even further.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Regardless of what you find yourself doing, rely only on your own smarts, abilities and resources. You could lock yourself out if you depend on others for help.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Listen to the suggestions of others, but don't use what they say as an excuse to cop out or fail to think for yourself, especially if you know more about things than they do.

Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Doing something good for phony reasons will be transparent to those you're trying to impress. Be sure your motives are sincere.

Aries March 21-April 19. When out in public, your common sense usually enables you to maintain a pleasant demeanor toward those who have offended you in the past.

Taurus April 20-May 20. Do not employ permissiveness toward those in your charge when discipline is required. You'll be asking for trouble; the former compounds mistakes, while the latter corrects them.

Gemini May 21-June 20. Unless your mind is totally focused on your work, even tasks you handle on a regular basis could go awry; so don't take anything for granted. Serious mistakes are likely if you stray.

Cancer June 21-July 22. If you're watching your pennies, subdue extravagant spending habits, such as purchasing something at its initial price when you know it will be reduced down the line.

Sheer delight

► Transparent looks aren't just a passing fad ► Sexy (but dignified) ways to play peek-a-boo with your outfit

When we first spotted see-through looks on the runway, we were skeptical. How would women pull off these revealing blouses and skirts in the real world without causing scandals or getting called in to HR? Turns out artful layering with tanks and slips — and careful placement of transparent fabrics — make for romantic and dreamy ensembles.

1. Add more info to your profile pop-up window

To most Google+ "strangers" you're just a thumbnail. If they do care to hover over your avatar, then you're a thumbnail with a few words or description, likely your company name, profession or location. There's a simple "hack" that can make Google+ display much more info when someone hovers your avatar — similar to the appearance of Twitter. Go to edit your profile, select the employment section, and in the first "Employer name" box, write your bio and check the "current" box. Whatever you have written should now appear when people hover over your avatar (see right).

2. Organize with circles

Circles are a useful tool for organization of content. You can create empty circles to "share" under different headings. Create a notepad. Make "bookmarks" for links you want to check out when you have more time, "read later" for longer posts, and even "test" if, like us, you want to muck around on the service without annoying your followers. Once you've set this up and shared content to your empty circles, viewing that circle's stream will bring up the Plus bits you wanted to save.

3. Click on profile pics to scroll through

One really neat trick Google has built into Plus is the ability to scroll through all of a user's uploaded profile pics directly from the profile or posts page. You can do this by clicking on the person's avatar image at the top left of the screen. If they have added more than one pic, Plus will flip through the album there and then.

4. Disable sharing

One of our favorite things about Google+ is limited, rather than public, sharing. You can share a post with one person — or the entire world. However, there's nothing to say that person won't click "share" to expose your private post to the entire world. Thankfully, Google+ offers the ability to disable sharing on posts. If you've posted something you'd like to stay private, click on the drop-down menu arrow at the top right of the post and select "disable reshare."

5. Find a post's permalink

If you want to find a post's permalink, it's simple. If the post was shared publicly, you can hit the drop-down menu arrow at the top right and select "link to this post." This will open the post in a separate tab, allowing you to copy and past its URL. If the post has limited sharing options, this setting won't appear in the drop-down menu. Instead, click on the time or date stamp at the top of the post. This will also open the post in a new window and reveal the URL, although not everyone will be able to view it.

► Biggest wide receiver on the market shuns other offers to stay with Jets ► Reportedly will sign 5-year, $50 million deal ► With Holmes back in fold, where does Gang Green go next?

A league source told Metro New York yesterday morning that the Jets have signed free agent wide receiver Antonio Holmes to a multi-year deal.

Official details of the contract will not be announced until July 29 per the terms of the new collective bargaining agreement. However, multiple reports have placed the deal at five years and $50 million, with $24 million guaranteed.

Holmes was one of the most coveted free agents on the market and the top priority for the Jets this off-season. The speedy signing of the star wideout lets the Jets focus on their bevy of other free agents, such as Antonio Cromartie and Braylon Edwards.

Holmes sat out the first four games of the 2010 NFL season due to violations of the league's substance abuse policy after coming in a trade from the Steelers.

Holmes still had 52 catches for 746 yards and six touchdowns, but his ability to make game-changing plays earned him the nickname "Tone Time."

Rumored to be a top target of many teams, including being coveted by potential suitors such as the Washington Redskins, Holmes has not yet confirmed the deal through his agent but did post a photo on his Twitter account after he downed what appears to be a celebratory bottle of Louis Roederer Cristal.

on Jacobs' contract

Brandon Jacobs said he'd be willing to restructure his contract so the team can re-sign friend Ahmad Bradshaw.

As of yesterday, however, there was no word on a restructured deal. With the Panthers' DeAngelo Williams staying put there's more pressure on New York. ● METRO

Giants start slow, sign new center

Due to the new provisions of the collective bargaining agreement, every team expects huge turnovers and roster shakeups.

The $120 million salary cap has put a pinch on many teams already over the threshold and the Giants are no different — starting the week $11.3 million over the limit. This has made many players vulnerable to the dreaded cap casualty predicament and forced Big Blue into reworking contracts, bringing in cheaper talent, or outright releasing veterans.

As of yesterday, New York asked multiple players to restructure deals to get under the cap. Some obliged, while most like offensive lineman Shawn Andrews and defensive tackle Rocky Bernard were sent packing.

The Giants wasted no time in trying to fill the various holes on the O-line — specifically Shaun O'Hara's spot — as they signed center David Baas from the 49ers. Baas is a six-year vet who can also play both guard spots. It's a shrewd move by Big Blue who have discarded three key offensive linemen since the lockout ended Monday.

BYE-BYE BELTRAN

► Mets reportedly have deal to send outfielder to Giants ► Major pitching prospect comes back in return ► Closes the book on tumultuous tenure

Carlos Beltran is no longer a New York Met.

The right fielder was not in the lineup for the Mets in Cincinnati last night and multiple reports indicate that the Mets and San Francisco Giants were finalizing a trade that would send Beltran to the world champions for pitching prospect Zach Wheeler.

"While we have been engaged in discussions, we are not in a position to comment at this time," the Mets said in a statement yesterday afternoon. "As soon as we have something definitive to announce, we will do so."

Giants' manager Bruce Bochy was more forthcoming when asked about Beltran before yesterday's game in Philadelphia.

"He's a special player. Carlos has all the tools you look for in a player," Bochy said. "He's a great defender, a switch-hitter, he can run, good instincts. He plays the game hard and he plays it right."

Signed to a seven-year, $119 million contract following the 2005 postseason, Beltran's tenure with the Mets ends with 149 home runs, a .289 batting average and five All-Star appearances.

In Wheeler, the Mets land a 6-foot-3, right-hander that the Giants selected sixth overall in the 2009 draft. Wheeler is 7-5 with a 3.99 ERA for Single-A San Jose. He's struck out

Carlos Beltran played in 76 percent of the Mets games over the first six years of his contract. He has played in all but five games this season.

98 batters in 88 innings.

The deal would dovetail perfectly with Beltran's stated wish to play for a contender and be an everyday player. His bat would add a much needed boost to a Giants' squad that's ranked 25th in batting average. The Mets and Giants are tied for 23rd with 66 home runs.

It had long been believed that the Mets would attempt to trade Beltran in order to begin the reconstruction of the farm system. Because of his performance this season, he became the pre-eminent player on the market. Boston, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Atlanta were thought to be in the sweepstakes.

Mets COO Jeff Wilpon traveled to Cincinnati Tuesday night. He claimed that he wanted to watch the second game of the four game series against the Reds. Still, the timing of his trip coincided with the last week of the non-waiver trade deadline.

► Hernandez pitched seven innings and allowed one run.

Yankees bow out against King

Felix Hernandez represents the pitching fantasies of many Yankee fans. Phil Hughes represents the reality.

While Hernandez was in control over seven innings, Hughes allowed two runs and nine hits in six innings as the Mariners snapped their much-publicized 17-game losing streak with a 9-2 rout.

As the nonwaiver trade deadline approaches Sunday, Yankee fans are left to dream about Hernandez, who is 5-0 with a 1.29 ERA in his last five starts against the Bombers.

"He's always been one of their best guys," Curtis Granderson said. "That's why he's their ace. It seems like every time we face him, both here and their stadium, he pitches really well."

Left unsaid was that he won't become one of the Yankees' best guys anytime soon, not unless the first name on the return package is a major league talent. For all the phone calls and talking heads insisting that Hernandez must become a Yankee, it will have to remain just talk.

Hughes is four starts into his return, and the results have been mixed. He pitched well in Toronto, but couldn't win when the Yankees scored 17 runs against Oakland.

"I'm trying to find myself," Hughes said. I may be trying too hard in some spots and I'm trying to give a little extra when I need it."

Regardless of whether he finds himself, the object of Yankee fans affection is headed back to Seattle and reality is remaining in New York. LARRY FLEISHER

Jets are still hot on trail of Raiders CB Asomugha

The Jets appear to be hot in pursuit of former Raiders cornerback Nnamdi Asomugha, perhaps the prized possession of the free agent market.

Reports have surfaced that Asomugha and the Jets are in advanced discussion for a deal that would bring one of the game's top lockdown players to partner with Darrelle Revis, largely considered the top cornerback in the league.

Jets management is unable to comment on any player specifics at this juncture of free agency, but a player like Asomugha fits coach Rex Ryan's 3-4 scheme perfectly.

"I think corner is a huge priority in our system we do play so much man coverage," Ryan said.

Revis, a perennial All-Pro player and the highest paid cornerback in the league, is personal friends with Aso-mugha and admits to having talked with him concerning a possible move to the Jets.

"Bringing Nnamdi on board, that's great. He's the best cornerback in the league. Me and him as a tandem would be unbelievable, it'd be awesome," Revis said.

▶ Asomugha

"We'd love to have him as a teammate."

Jets quarterback Mark Sanchez on Tuesday expressed to the media his willingness to rework his contract to help give the Jets cap room to bring in a player like Holmes or Asomugha. KRISTIAN DYER

Isles hold rally for new stadium

▶ A few thousand fans turned out at Nassau Coliseum for the rally.

CHRISTOPHER PASATIERI/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Estimated 2,800 fans pushed for 'yes' votes ▶ Wang says new arena will create more than 3,000 jobs in LI

Matt Moulson's words were blunt and powerful.

"Charles had made it pretty clear that he's passionate about staying in Long Island. I don't know how much more the guy can do," the Islanders left wing said during Wednesday's rally to energize Nassau County residents to vote for Nassau County Executive Ed Mangano's plan to build a new Nassau Coliseum. The vote is scheduled for Monday.

The Islanders were represented at the rally by Moulson, owner Charles Wang, defenseman Ty Wishart and goaltender Rick DiPietro. Mangano and labor leaders were in attendance as well.

An Islanders spokesperson estimated that 2,800 attended — many chanting "Build it now!"

NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman, Islanders officials and Mangano have been steadfast that the team will not play in the Coliseum after the lease expires following the 2015 season.

Wang and Mangano have said Long Island would no longer be a viable place for families to live if the current Coliseum closes and the Islanders are forced to move. Nassau Coliseum is the second oldest arena in the NHL behind Madison Square Garden. The Garden is undergoing massive renovations and is expected to be completed by 2013-14.

Mangano unveiled a study in a late June press conference at the coliseum with Wang.

The Camoin Associates report said $1.2 billion in revenue, 1,515 construction jobs and 3,040 permanent jobs would be created if residents voted for the building. Mangano also announced that the Islanders will pay 11.5 percent of every dollar earned, and that the franchise and county had agreed to a new lease that would keep the team on Long Island through 2045.

Wang's estimated the new building would be used more than 200 times a year and would seat 17,500 for hockey and 19,000 for concerts.

► Santana, center, is mobbed by his teammates after completing the no-hitter.

Angels' Santana throws first no-hitter

No, not that Santana.

The Angels' Ervin Santana — as opposed to the Mets' rehabbing Johan Santana — threw the first no-hitter of his career in a 3-1 win over the Indians yesterday.

Santana also struck out 10 in the outing. He allowed just two baserun-ners, including the first batter of the game. Ezequiel Carrera reached first on a throwing error by Erick Aybar, stole second and would eventually score on a wild pitch.

After that, Santana had just one walk — in the eighth inning.

Santana improved to 6-8

in what has been an inconsistent season for the right hander.

Santana's no-hitter was already the third this season, joining Justin Verlan-der and fellow Dominican Republic native Francisco Liriano.

It was also the first no-hitter with a run scored since 1993. ● METRO
